

THE THAMES BARRIER – THE TECHNICAL TOUR
on Wednesday 21 May 2014

This visit has been organised by Tony Colclough.

The Thames Barrier – The Technical Tour

This visit to the Barrier will include a technical presentation, a Q & A session and a visit to the Barrier itself and the main machinery areas. The Technical Tours are intended for ‘learned institutions, colleges and engineering groups’ and are not offered to the general public. Because there will be open staircases to negotiate, it is held to be safe only for the able-bodied and a no-walking-stick policy is enforced. However, it is possible for those excluded to remain behind at the Information Centre, which will be reserved for our exclusive use, and to view the displays..

The Thames Barrier was opened in 1982 and protects London from flooding, in particular when exceptionally high tidal surges occur in the estuary. It has been raised many times in its life, the last occasion being on 6 Dec 2013. It stretches 520 m across the river at Woolwich and, when raised, its main gates are as high as a five-storey building.

Where and When to Meet

We meet at 13:00 at ‘The View Café’ near the Thames Barrier from which the Barrier can be seen and refreshments purchased.

Getting There

The nearest Overground station is Charlton. Trains run from London Bridge Station and Waterloo East. The Transport-for-London Journey Planner can be found at <http://www.tfl.gov.uk/>. To walk to the Barrier, follow the route shown on the map below. Emerging from Charlton Station, turn left and walk a short distance to the main Woolwich Road. Turn right at the Antigallican pub and walk eastwards along the Woolwich Road over two roundabouts. Just after the second roundabout turn left onto the Woolwich Barrier site and follow signs to the View Café. The walk takes roughly 20 min. Frequent buses 472, 161 and 177 also run along the Woolwich Road heading east.

Lunch

A sandwich lunch will be provided in the View Café at 13:30. The cost is included in that quoted for the visit.
