LONDON AND SOUTH EASTERN BRANCH REMS SECTION
BLACKMOOR NURSERY and GILBERT WHITE'S MUSEUM

Thursday 1 May 2008

This visit has been organised by George Freeman

The BLACKMOOR NURSERY was started about 1920 by Lord Wolmer on the Blackmoor estate. He had to do his own grafting as suitable trees to the East Malling specifications were not available. It is now 250 acres and grows and sells fruit to the multiple outlets on the high streets, its own farm shop and plant centre. They grow their own stocks, graft (bud) and supply bare-rooted trees of all descriptions to the industry and on-line customers - apples, pears, plums and soft fruits. Most of these can also be obtained from the plant centre as well.

We will be taken around the orchard and possibly the nursery, time permitting, by minibus or tractor by the current director of the orchard and nursery, Peter Barwick, and shown how they carry out these operations. It will be blossom time so should be pretty as well as informative.

After lunch in Selborne we will visit the GILBERT WHITE'S HOUSE and OATES MUSEUM. The Rev. Gilbert White (1720 – 1793) made extensive scientific records of his experiments with and observations of Natural History. He lived in the house and the 20 acres of garden and parkland have been largely restored to how it was in his time. He is known for his books - Natural History of Selborne (the original manuscript is on display) and The Gardener's Kalendar.

The Oates Museum exhibits focus on the lives and adventures of Captain Lawrence Oates and his uncle Frank. The Lawrence Oates gallery explains the life and tragic death of the soldier and explorer. He was on Captain Scott's 1911 Terra Nova expedition. Frank explored Central America, Africa and parts of the Indian Subcontinent.
